Escape from the jungle

It was Christmas Eve 1971. A film director called Werner Herzog was at the airport in Lima, Peru. <sup>1</sup> _____ Herzog waited for the next flight and the plane took off from the airport without him. A few minutes later, it crashed into the jungle. There was only one survivor — a 17-year-old German girl called Juliane Koepke.

<sup>2</sup> _____ When the plane crashed, Juliane fell through the trees and landed on the ground. She woke up 24 hours later.

<sup>3</sup> _____ She knew that she needed to get out of the jungle. Juliane didn't have the right clothes for a journey like this — she had a miniskirt! — but she knew a lot about the jungle. Her parents were scientists. They studied the jungle in Peru, and the jungle was Juliane's home when she was a young child.

<sup>4</sup> _____ When she found water, she followed it and soon came to a river. She knew that there were often villages near a river. But it wasn't an easy journey for her. <sup>5</sup> _____ She often had to walk or swim through dangerous water, full of crocodiles. People flew over in small planes to look for survivors from the accident.

<sup>6</sup> _____ Two days later, Juliane Koepke walked out of the jungle, very hungry and tired, but alive! Fifteen years later, Werner Herzog went back to Peru and made a film about Juliane Koepke's amazing journey.
